Finding quality respiratory care for patients in the long-term care setting can be complicated – but it doesn't have to be.

For more than three decades, skilled nursing and long-term care facilities have trusted Advanced Lifeline Respiratory Services (ALRS) to help them provide their patients with quality respiratory care.

How Can ALRS Help You?

? Do you have a patient who needs ongoing respiratory care after being discharged from the hospital?

ALRS can help. We accept patients who meet the following admission criteria:

- The patient has a tracheostomy
- The patient's ventilator operates at certain identified setting thresholds
- The patient does not require dialysis services*
- The patient is not undergoing active cancer treatment such as radiation or chemotherapy
- The patient does not require any sort of movement restraints, whether chemical or physical
- The patient is medically stable
- The patient has at least one payer source

Other factors may also be considered on a case-by-case basis.

 Some ALRS facilities may offer dialysis for ventilator patients. Contact your local ALRS representative for more information.*
